The UA NROTC Unit bell, dated 1918 from WWI, is named in honor of the two students who joined the Naval Service and died during World War I.

Alexander Tindolph Berger was born October 13th, 1896 in Minneapolis, Minnesota. He attended the University of Arizona from 1914-1917 and then dropped out to join the Marine Corps and fight in World War I. As a Private, he served with 6th Marines, 4th Marine Brigade in the U.S. Army 2d Infantry Division (Commanded by Marine Major General John A. Lejeune). He was killed in action on July 19th, 1918 in Varcy, France at the age of 21. He is buried in Greenlawn Cemetery, Indiana.

Hugh Daye Campbell was born July 22, 1982 in Winslow Arizona. He attended The University of Arizona, and then dropped out and enlisted in the Navy in July, 1917 to fight in World War I. In December 1918 he was stationed at Norfolk, Virginia and was hit by a truck while standing in the mess line. He was in the hospital there, and transferred to the hospital in Los Angeles, California where he died the age of 26. He is buried in Calvary Cemetery, Flagstaff, Arizona.

In 1919, Private Berger's uncle, a longtime wealthy Tucsonan, donated $5,000 towards the construction of the fountain. On January 31st 1920, a large crowd gathered for the unveiling of the Berger Memorial Fountain dedicated to the 13 UA students who died in WWI. General John Pershing delivered a speech as the guest of honor. There are 13 spouts coming from the fountain representing the 13 students who died in WWI. Since its dedication, two more names were identified and are included in the World War I Memorial Plaque located in the Rotunda at the Student Union Memorial Center.
